

Kaiser Permanente Patient Bill of Rights and Responsibilities

Patient Bill of Rights

As a patient of the Kaiser Permanente Medical Offices, you are entitled to considerate and respectful care, regardless of your race, religion, education, sex, culture, background or financial status.

You have the right to know the name of the doctor who has primary responsibility for coordinating your care, and the identity and functions of others who are involved in providing care.

You have the right to receive a description of the proposed treatment, the significant risks, and the various alternative methods of treatment including the risks and advantage of each and the consequences of receiving non-treatment before you consent to any action. You also may refuse a recommended treatment, test or procedure if not required by law, and you may leave the facility against the advice of a Physician at your own risk.

You have the right to refuse to participate in any treatment which is considered experimental in nature. You will not be involved in such a study without your understanding and permission.

You are entitled to privacy concerning your medical care, including examinations, consultations and discussions of your case. Facts and information about consultation, examination and treatment are considered confidential, unless permitted by law, no information or records pertaining to your care will be released without your written permission.

You have the right to formulate an Advance Directive and appoint a surrogate to make health care decisions on your behalf. Information about Directives is provided at the Health Education Center.

You have the right to register a concern regarding service, care or medical management and to obtain resolution. Concerns regarding service can be directed to the unit manager, patient relations personnel, or administrator. Concerns regarding medical management can be directed to the physician involved, the Physician Chief of the department or the Associate Physician in Chief. Presenting a concern will not compromise your quality of care.

You have the right to know before you leave the facility about your continuing health care needs, including the time, location of appointment and name of the physician who will provide follow-up care.

Patient Responsibilities:

You have the responsibility to pursue a healthy lifestyle. You must provide to the best of your knowledge, accurate and complete information about present complaints, past illnesses, hospitalization, medications and other information related to your health. You have the responsibility to report unexpected changes in your condition and are responsible for reporting whether you clearly comprehend a contemplated course of action and what expected of you.

You are responsible for following a treatment plan recommended by the practitioner primarily responsible for your care. This may include following the instruction of nurses and allied health care personnel as they carry out the coordinated plan of your care, implement the responsible practitioner's orders, and enforce the applicable medical office rules and regulations. You are responsible for keeping appointments. If you are unable to do so for any reason notify the responsible practitioner or the facility.

You are responsible for your action if you refuse treatment or do not follow the practitioner's instruction.

You are responsible for assuring that the financial obligations of your health care are fulfilled as promptly as possible.

You are responsible for following medical office rules and regulations affecting patient care and conduct.

You are responsible for being considerate of the rights of other patients and medical office property.
